IG Index Awarded Financial Spread Betting Provider of the Year – Again

Third accolade for 2010 comes from Investors Chronicle and Financial Times readers

LONDON--(BUSINESS WIRE)--IG Index, the UK's largest spread betting provider*, was last week heralded as Financial Spread Betting Provider of the Year at the annual Investors Chronicle Investment Awards dinner. Having already received the same title from readers of both Money AM and What Investment in recent months, the awards underline once again the resounding confidence clients have in the company.

Tim Hughes, Managing Director of IG Index, commented:

"It goes without saying that we are delighted to have received this latest award and it certainly serves to emphasise our commitment to innovation and managing client relationships in an industry that can be seen as becoming increasingly homogenised. Whilst a commitment to tight spreads remains key to impressing clients, we are well aware that introductions such as our new iPhone dealing application, along with the robust nature of our traditional web-based trading platform, continue to contribute to our ongoing success."

In addition to the recently launched iPhone app, IG Index has been offering clients the ability to trade over a range of mobile platforms since 2004. Blackberry, PDA and other smartphones such as those running the Android operating system are all fully supported.

With a strong focus on education, IG Index runs regular face-to-face seminars from its London offices, along with a range of webinars. Furthermore, the company is currently concluding its 2010 series of regional seminars. These have proved extremely popular across the UK and will be extended into the new year and beyond.

Parent company IG Group was also recognised as Financial Provider of the Year in the 2010 Shares Magazine Reader Awards.
