

Smart Investing

SMSFs dominate ETF market

Jump straight to: Money Stuff, The Barefoot Investor or Smart Investing

 0 Comments | Permalink

Smart Investing Blog

Robin Bowerman

Tuesday, September 06, 2011 at 11:04am

Self-managed super funds are truly a dominant force among Exchange Traded Fund (ETF) investors.

Figures published in the Vanguard/Investment Trends 2011 Self Managed Super Funds Report released last week shows that of the 59,000 ETF investors as at May, 30,500 or almost 52 per cent were self-managed funds.

Why do SMSFs make up such a large percentage of ETF investors?

This is the question that specialist investment researcher Investment Trends has sought to answer.

The main reasons given by SMSFs for their most recent ETF investments are:

- Diversification (73 per cent of funds).
- Low cost (50 per cent).
- Lower risk than holding individual stocks (37 per cent).
- Liquidity and ease of sale (35 per cent).
- Access to specific overseas markets (33 per cent).
- Means to provide core of share portfolio (27 per cent).
- Trading flexibility (26 per cent).

Less common reasons for SMSFs' most recent ETF investments included transparency of underlying investments (14 per cent of funds) and ability to quickly rebalance portfolio (13 per cent).

Most of the reasons that SMSFs give for investing in ETFs appear to suggest that many fund trustees are using the products as a means to reduce risk and increase opportunities through diversification and efficient rebalancing. These are, of course, key considerations – including in highly volatile markets.

And the emphasis on the low cost of ETFs suggests investors are concentrating on factors that they can have a large degree of control over in their portfolio, including the costs. High investment management costs are really highlighted to investors when investment returns are low or negative.

Receive Smart Investing™ by email, subscribe to our RSS feed, or listen to the podcast. Smart Investing™ is written by Robin Bowerman, Principal, Corporate Affairs & Market Development at Index Fund Manager Vanguard Investments Australia, leaders in investment, ETF, super & retirement solutions. This article represents a general view and you should seek financial advice before making investment decisions.

Recommend

Sign Up to see what your friends recommend.

Share |

Have Your Say

Comments are submitted for possible publication on the condition that they may be edited. Please provide a name, you may use a screen name – this will be published with your comment, and a working email address – not for publication, but for verification. The suburb/location field is optional. (Read our publication guidelines).

Submit your comments here:

Screen Name:*

Email Address:*

Suburb/Location:

BoldItalic*Quote*Link*Close Tags

Your Comments:*

How to add a link: Enter the text you wish to be clickable, select it and click the 'Link' button to enter the link details in the popup box. Maximum of 2 links.

* Required Fields

Insert an emoticon

SUBMIT

Email a friend

To email this article to a friend, fill in the form below

Your Name: *

Your Email: *

Recipient's Email: *

Subject: SMSFs dominate ETF ma

Message:

close x

Copyright 2011 News Limited. All times AEST (GMT +10).